

CHANDLER'S LOSING GAME.

THE PRIZE HE COVETS ELUDING ALL HIS EFFORTS TO GRAB IT

His Enemies Rally to Slaughter Him in His Own Pocket Borough—105 Votes Away from Victory—A Dismal Reminiscence.

CONCORD, July 13.—Secretary Chandler's boom seems to have fallen stillborn. An array of officeholders and patronage brokers arrived here last night, and was busy this morning. They labored in the interest of The Great-est Son of New Hampshire since Daniel Webster. Sir, unceasingly, and claimed that the vote would give him seventy-five votes. But they failed to reckon upon the personal antagonisms to Chandler, antagonisms which reach back twenty years. In the midst of all his apparent successes his enemies have been keeping their weapons bright, to be ready whenever his head should appear.

It is twenty years since W. E. Chandler was a candidate at the hands of the people for any place except Representative from his ward in this city, and this is the first opportunity which has been offered for striking him a blow. He does not seem to realize this. Coming from his handsome quarters in the Navy Department at Washington, it was evident from his bearing that he expected only to have to announce his name in order to be received with open arms. His friends told him so, and he has winning him the poor people's affections, and himself into a light where bitter passions are aroused and ugliness reigns. He might have known that the railroads will oppose him; that the railroads will be his bitterest enemies; that the railroads will rankle with bitter memories; that Patterson would exult at his fall; that Zappan despises him; that Marston hates him with fervor; in short, that the railroads will be his enemies to-day have begun the cry that Chandler is nothing but the agent of John Roach, the money-lender, and the hired attorney in the case of Pacific Railroad.

His influence, which nominated Gov. Hale and elected Senator Blair, is impotent when the railroads are arrayed against him, and he must make himself and a future legislature general as it is dangerous. His chances for

The Senate floor was yesterday considered exceedingly hot, but now it is expected to have cooled a little upon a breeze which has blown from the mountains of danger. Unless something unexpected happens, Mr. Chandler will go back to Washington tomorrow, and Mr. Chandler man, and it will be hard to have the New Hampshire delegation of 1891, in a more pocket borough.

Last night his friends claimed 75 votes to elect him, and his enemies predicted as the roll was called and footed. Mr. Chandler is a native of Bridgton, Bingham had the solid Democrats: Triggs, 34; Tappan, 30; Marston, 21; Stevens, 15; Smith, 13; Moore, 12; Gallinger, 10; Barnard, 10; and the rest of the delegation. Mr. Chandler will be no more of importance until Tuesday.

When Chandler's men will make their supreme effort; but what will it amount to? Can he have Smith's votes and perhaps enough scattering to reach 90. That is the outside limit set him now, and how he will get any more his most industrious figurers are unable to make out.

"Oh," said one of them to-day to a sidewalk gathering, "we shall arouse such a demand for fire on Tuesday the State will be on fire for him."

It will cost you $5,000 for every vote you gain for him," was the reply.

The Secretary is said to be much disturbed over to-day's vote, and already charges those near to him with having been deceived as to his strength. He is in no mood for defeat, and he does not see how it can be avoided. The present state of affairs shows how accurate was the prediction made weeks ago that Chandler would find it difficult to mount a candidate. But his candidacy, ushered in with such a flourish of trumpets, is practically at an end, and, like the other leading candidates he will simply be in the way until a new man can be agreed upon. That man may be looked for next week.

Congressman Ray is talked of, but it is really an impossibility, for fear that the Democrats would carry his district if he should be chosen. But the same is true of the case of Senator Daniel Barnard of Franklin is really the most promising man now in the list; as Judge Smith's refusal makes his support merely a possibility. The following are the names of the candidates for the House of Representatives in WASHINGTON, July 13.—The following are copied from the files of the War Department and will be of special interest to one of the candidates for the United States Senate from New Hampshire:—

SPECIAL ORDER NO. 101.—The following named officers having tendered their resignation in the face of the enemy, are hereby discharged from the military service of the United States * * * and Lieut James F. Briggs, A. O. M., Eleventh New Hampshire Volunteers.
By command of Major Gen. Sumner.
J. H. Tamm, Adj. Gen.

To Celebrate the Fall of the Bastille.
Thirty French societies will unite to-day in celebrating the fall of the Bastille in Paris on July 14, 1789. Delegates are to be present from New Jersey, Massachusetts, and Canada, and the Belgian and Swiss societies of this city, whose members speak the French language, are to send representatives. A large descrip-

[illegible]

Lang, Robinson & Co., flour dealers, by making false entries in the cash book of the firm, were arraigned yesterday for sentence. In view of the previous good character of the prisoners, and the fact that they made partial restitution of their stealings, Judge Gildersleeve committed them to the Elmira Reformatory.

Photographs of Car Horses Put in Evidence.
Michael McNally and Charles South, drivers of Third avenue surface cars, were accused by Bergh's officers at the Yorkville Police Court yesterday of driving disabled horses. The horses were brought in ambulances to the court and were awfully lame.

The photographer gave their hand-aided legs and sore backs every advantage of position. The prisoners gave the hail.

The Signal Office Prediction.

Local rains and slightly cooler, partly cloudy weather, light variable winds, rising, followed by falling barometer.

SPARKS FROM THE TELEGRAPH.

The Marquis Tseng, the Chinese Ambassador, has left London for Paris.

The Emperor William has given his sanction to the Prussian Church bill.

The Corrupt Practices bill passed through the committee stage in the House of Commons last night.

President Grevy of France has decorated L. A. Senecal of Montreal with the cross of the Legion of Honor.

Mr. Van Wagner, an American lawyer residing in London, has been appointed by the Massachusetts Commissioner to hear evidence in Alibates claims cases.

The Massachusetts Legislature has passed the bill appropriating the State tax of $2,000,000, in place of the $2,000,000 previously appropriated for the same purpose.

The Thursday Gracian, which sailed from Glasgow on the 24th inst., will take on board at Foyers, Ireland, 1750 persons from the Emnis Union. They are destined for Boston.

The Marquis of Landowale will sail from London in the steamship Circassian on Oct. 17th for Canada, to assume the duties of the office of Governor-General of that Dominion.

The Military and Naval Clubs of London have invited the Duke of Devonshire to give a dinner at the Grosvenor Hotel next Lord Wootley, Sir Henry Hallifax, and other gentlemen at a dinner.

Mr. Wootley, now 35 years of age, and married, was found dead on the Cumberland highway at Warrimack, K. J., yesterday morning. His head and body were badly injured.

Honroast, A. Constant, ethnologist, will, near Chateau

The House of Lords has dismissed, with cost, the appeal in the case of McHenry versus President Jewett and the New York, Lake Erie and Western Railroad Company. The suit involved $250,000.

summer residents of Richfield Springs, N. Y. have subscribed purses for two trot races for running horses, and a foot race, which are to be run to-day.

The total amount of the subscription for the first six months of this year is $440.00, and the total to inaugurate complete $822.87. This is only about half as great as the loss for the corresponding time last year.

The Misses Cadwell of Watertown, N. Y. pieces of the Watertown Free Will Baptist Church, have purchased a chapel in the cemetery in Watertown, at a cost of $15,000., and will donate it to the Cemetery Association.

None of the French Ministry will be present at the Exposition Universelle, which the Republic in the Place Chateau d'Eau as the President of the Republic has insisted upon giving in his speech to the refusal to grant

A special mail and express train on the Central Railroad ran into a derailed car at Schenectady at 1:50 yesterday morning. The engine was wrecked, and Edward Wemple, the engineer, had his head crushed. It is thought that he will die. Wemple is one of the oldest engineers on the road, and is said to be worth $10,000.

The greater portion of the philosophical, chemical, and astronomical apparatus of the celebrated Dr. Joseph Priestley, the discoverer of oxygen, have been sent by the family of his great grandson, the late Dr. Joseph Priestley of Northumberland, Pa., to the Smithsonian Institution and will be prominently displayed in the Grand National Museum.